Spanish Levels

Hopefully these guidelines will help you choose the right group for you, but if you're not sure, just email us at spenlanguages.spanish@gmail.com and we can help assess your level further.

New Beginner

This is for students who haven't really studied before or for a long time. They may know a few words and might have done a little Duolingo for example, but still need to study the basics

Beginner

This is for students who have taken a New Beginner course, so they know the very basics like numbers, days, greetings, some food and drink, 'ser' vs 'estar', 'gustar', some grammar, etc... but still need lots of support forming sentences and remembering vocabulary. Maybe for students who did GCSE Spanish a long time ago and can remember the basics still

Beginner plus

This is for students who have done the New Beginner and Beginner level, or for students who have some grasp of Spanish grammar and have started to form sentences and can have basic conversations with their peers with support from the teacher. Maybe for students who did A-Level Spanish a long time ago and need to refresh their memory.

Pre-intermediate

This is for students who feel fairly confident with the main verb conjugations and can have conversations with their peers with some help from the teacher with accuracy

Pre-intermediate Plus

This is for students who have done Pre-intermediate level, or students who may have reached Intermediate level in the past, but feel a little rusty

Intermediate

This is for students who are starting to feel a bit more confident and can hold a conversation in Spanish independently as well as start to use the different verb tenses independently, but they need help with accuracy and fluency. The teacher may move on to more complex grammar structures.

Intermediate Plus

This is for students who have done Intermediate level and feel they are moving towards upper-intermediate level, or for students who are intermediate level but want to challenge themselves.
